BASKETBALL POWER RATINGS

KEY: W-L: Indicates Won-Loss record vs the Pointsread. PR: Team's Power Rating based on comparative strength of each team. HC: Home Court advantage. For proper guideline, simply add Home Court advantage to Power Rating, if the team is playing at home. Difference between home team's total (Power Rating + Home Court), and opponent's Power Rating = probable point difference between the teams. Measured from a TOP RATING of 50.

 These 2 squads have met more than any other pair in the history of the NFL, with this marking their 182nd matchup, but only their 2nd such playoff faceoff. The first came in 1941, with the Bears winning 33-14 at Wrigley Field. And they've never before met for the NFC title. The Packers have been brilliant, of course, with those 48 pts at Atlanta marking the most ever in their storied playoff history, & the 2nd most pts for a playoff road team. And that came vs a Falcon squad which was on a 16-1 SU run in the Georgia Dome with Ryan under center. Green Bay never punted in that rout (4 drives of at least 80 yds), with Rodgers continuing his brilliant play, completing 31-of-36 for 336 yds (more than Favre ever had in a playoff game) & 3/0. He now stands at 34/11 for the season, along with 4,258 yds). Check turning a 14-7 deficit into a 42-14 lead vs the Falcs. And that under-the-radar Pack "D" ranks #1 in scoring. But can they keep it going against the latest version of the "Monsters of the Midway"? They split their 2 meetings this season, with the Bears prevailing 20-17 (final 0:04), in an early Monday Nighter, when the Packers were flagged for 152 penalty yds. Their rematch was "do-or-die" for Green Bay, which needed a 4th-quarter TD pass from Rodgers for the 10-3 win on the final week of regular season play. Cutler has evolved into a true leader, & last week he became the first QB with 2 TDs both rushing & passing in a playoff game since Otto Graham in '55. Bears nailed TDs in 3 of their first 4 drives in win over Seattle, but won't happen vs this Packer "D". Rodgers & Co simply a cut above Chicago.

 Rematches are unquestionably, the overriding theme of this year's NFL playoffs, with only the Jets/Colts & Ravens/Chiefs meetings not pairing squads which have previously played during the 2010 season. These 2 outfits met on Dec 19, with the Jets (+5) snapping a 2-game slide, in overcoming a 17-10 deficit late in the 3rd, for a 22-17 win, despite 25-17 FD & 378-276 yd deficits. As a matter of fact, the Jets snapped a 12-quarter run without an offensive TD, in that upset. And note NY running for 106 yds in that one. May not seem like much, but only 2 teams topped 75 RYs on the Steelers all season (103 by the Pats). That's right, Pitt allowed just 62.8 RYpg, which is the 5th best such stat in NFL history. Ravens last week: 35 RYs (1.9 ypr). And note the Steelers holding 6 of their 7 opponents, prior to that one, to 8.0 ppg. That contest was a game of breaks, with the key play coming on a 58-yd Roethlisberger prayer, as the Ravens inexplicably rushed just 3 men on a 3rd-&-19, after collapsing the pocket all game long. Ben is now 19/5, with 3,426 yds, in just 13 games. This marks Pitt's 3rd title game in 6 years, with 23-14 and 34-17 wins in '08 & '05, en route to Super Bowl rings. The Jets haven't made it that far since the hallowed '68 Joe Namath season, failing to advance in 3 title games in the interim. Sanchez now has an amazing 4 playoff road wins in just 2 years (3 TD passes vs the Pats), with all 4 coming in the dog role. Can New York take down Manning, Brady, & Roethlisberger? Maybe, but Jets' bread-&-butter overland game won't open much up for Sanchez & Co. If Steelers don't give it away this is theirs.
